Monifieth

Monifieth is an ancient settlement, dating back to the 9th Century at least. Stones discovered at the burgh's historic St Rule's Church indicate that it was a Pictish centre of some importance.

Until the 19th. Century, Monifieth was a sleepy little village, but the rise of the local jute industry and the revival of the foundry saw workers pouring into the town and the population grew to above 2000.

Today Monifieth is noted as a golfing centre, with the Scottish Amateur Golf Championship and the qualifying rounds for the Open Championships held here.

Monifieth enjoys a fine setting and a good range of leisure amenities. Monikie and Crombie Country Parks are close by and offer a range of leisure pursuits for all the family including watersports. Particularly popular is Monifieth's Blue Seaway, an outdoor recreation area with children's adventure playground and wheeled sports area for older children.
